My heart is broken. I never imagined I would be referring to my uncle in the past tense. Losing my father, Senopha's older brother (Daviliece F. Choute) was hard, but losing him is just as hard. Senopha Choute was AWESOME! He had his moments, but it was all love. He worked hard to provide for his family. His home was a passageway for growth in our family. Senopha was stern, but fun and enjoyed life. My family and I thank everyone for their condolences. My uncle was a great man. He was a great uncle. I love him because he loved and enjoyed life – his birthday was always a BIG DEAL. I know who he was. I know what defined him. I got to see it when I lived with him, on our trips, when we celebrated everyone's accomplishments or lack thereof with a barbecue/party. He loved to dance, hence his nickname "Boogie". Tonton, I love you, I appreciate you. My uncle was not perfect, he was human. His ability to be a GREAT patriarch in our family overshadowed his imperfections. Senopha's warm and inviting personality gave us a model to strive for. It took me a few days to realize/accept you were not going to wake up from this sleep, you're gone. My sorrow is immense, but I know his life, and I know it was great because it was filled with good. And as much as I hate to see him go. I know that on the morning of February 14th 2019 at Lee Memorial Hospital in Fort Myers, Florida, surrounded by the family he loved so much, my uncle moved on from this world. I love you, Tonton.
