It's with a mixture of shock and sadness that we say goodbye to our friend Angie. She opened her home to us and treated us more as family than friends. We always had a place at her table during the holidays when we couldn't be with our own families. We shared a love for going out and having fun as well as cheering on the New England Patriots. It won't be the same watching the games without her but we'll continue to save her a seat on gameday with a cool glass of hard apple cider in case she decides to surprise us and drop in for a visit.
