MotherI did not want to let you goBut, I knew that it was time. You'd braved so much in life, I knowMy selfishness would be unkind. I'm sure you tried to stay with us. The pull, it must be great. Familiar faces not seen in years, You could not make them wait. So now, it is with them you dwell, I'm sure they've missed you so. So rest in peace and comfort now,Let all your worries go. Someday I'll be with you again, You'll make a place for me. I'll feel so safe and right at home, For in your arms I'll be. Your loving daughter, Janice
