Words cannot describe the loss I have felt since finding out Marie has made her transition to the other side. I know her Mother, brother Joey and her good friend Fran were there to greet her. Her sudden departure is sad for the wonderful people she left behind. I keep thinking of her husband and sons and prize Danny who she adored more than life. Her best friend Louis who she praised and adored, She is at peace now. It is those of us that are left that are sad. She was a friend to everyone she met. She met me because I was friends with her brother and I soon became a close friend to her. We chatted more often recently as she was helping me with a book I am writing about her brother's heart ❤️ transplant. Instead of reading the book she will now be helping me from above write the book! "I Found My Heart in San Diego: A Story About Faith, Healing and the Power of Belief" by James M Vera. Just took on a new deeper meaning. Marie I miss you already. I saved your voice messages. I will finish "The Story" I promise. Allah'u'ahah!
